Ohio State and India

★ Ohio State is one of four U.S. universities to receive the Obama-Singh 21st Century Knowledge Initiative award in 2013 for its project, “Training the Next Generation of STEM Faculty at Higher Education Institutions in India.” Ohio State will receive approximately $250,000 in grant monies over a three-year period to launch a pilot program with Aligarh Muslim University in India. The program aims to lay the groundwork for capacity building in STEM education and research at Indian universities in collaboration with universities in the United States.
★ Rattan Lal, Distinguished University Professor of Soil Science in the School of Environment and Natural Resources, was the lead author of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (1998-2000), which earned the 2007 Nobel Peace Prize.
★ Ohio State offers language course work in Hindi, Urdu, Persian and Tibetan, as well as historical linguistic courses devoted to the study of Indo-European, Indic and Sanskrit texts.
★ More than 600 students from India are enrolled at Ohio State.
★ Ohio State has five Memoranda of Agreement with universities in India.
★ Ohio State offers six study abroad programs in India.
★ Ohio State has been collaborating with universities and corporations in India since 1958, focusing on advancements in educational training and agricultural research with partners such as the Punjab Agricultural University.
★ Researchers from Ohio State and Pondicherry University have teamed up to study the evolutionary effects of gene flow between crops and their wild relatives, supporting further research in the areas of food production, safety and supply.
★ Ohio State’s internationally recognized Department of Mechanical and Aerospace Engineering is working with partners in India on the development of a joint executive education program in automotive noise and vibration control.
